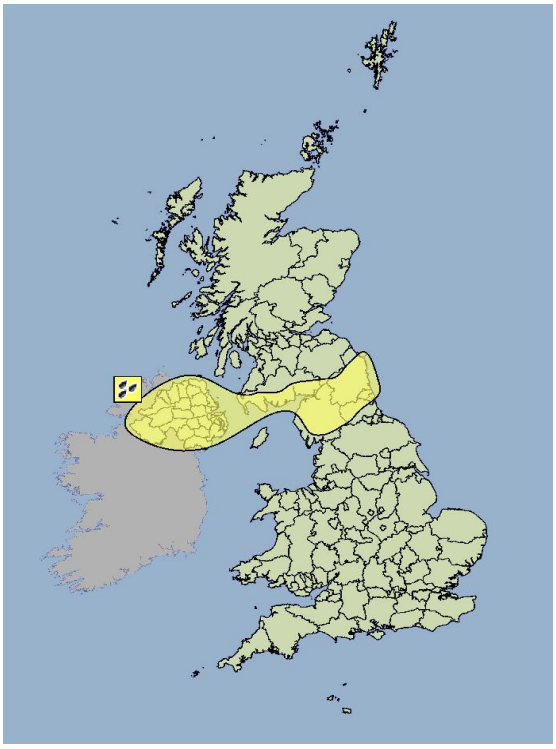
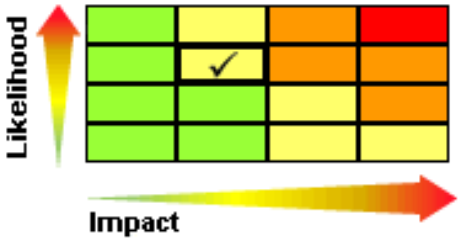
National Severe Weather Warning Service





Chief Forecasters Assessment
Rainfall totals of 20-40 mm could bring some localised flooding with any temporary snowfall bringing some difficult travel conditions over higher ground. Also later on Thursday morning gusts of 60 mph are expected across coastal County Down and the Rhins of Galloway which could bring some minor travel disruption.

The Met Office have issued a Yellow Warning of Rain

Valid from 21:00 on Wed, 22nd Feb 2017 until 14:00 on Thu, 23rd Feb 2017

A spell of heavy rain will affect Northern Ireland, southern Scotland and parts of northern England during Wednesday night and Thursday morning, falling as snow over some of the higher ground.

This has the potential to lead to some travel disruption and localised flooding.

The warning has been updated to extend the area into parts of southern Scotland and northern England.
